ExplanationTxt:

In order to advance scientific and conservation goals, Field Projects International (FPI) conducts tropical biology research at locations around the world. Our long-term educational programs and field courses support this mission by training the next generation of field scientists. FPI also consults for international partners in the planning and operation of field laboratories that monitor wildlife health and biodiversity.

ExplanationTxt:

Primates Peru (DBA Field Projects International) conducts biological research and provides educational opportunities for students pursuing careers in related fields. Such work is carried out primarily through short- and long-term training programs based at field stations around the globe. Our research, outreach initiatives, and partnerships further support the goal of better understanding and protecting threatened ecosystems worldwide.

Studies we conduct have been published in a range of academic journals. In addition, many of our protocols and procedures are made available at no cost to other researchers and groups, including the establishment and publishing of best practices for safe primate mark-recapture programs. We have led initiatives to promote science education and conservation, and our scientists have appeared in popular press, podcasts, and our scientists have appeared in popular press, podcasts, and other media.

#3: FormAndLineReferenceDesc: Part III, line 2

ExplanationTxt:

Due to the global pandemic adversely impacting international travel, Field Projects International was not able to conduct field research or training programs in 2020. Therefore we reinstated three programs in 2021 that we were unable to do in 2020: Field research training, field courses, and laboratory development in the form of the In situ lab initiative (or ISL). These three main program activities are described in detail below: Long-term Training Programs: Participants commit 5-8 weeks to assisting senior scientists and veterinarians and gain experience with data collection and analysis relating to a diverse array of flora and fauna. Field Courses: Students in 10-14 day courses learn field research and laboratory methodologies in tropical biology, primatology, genomics and biodiversity monitoring. Laboratory Installation: We coordinate field laboratory design and supplies in order to build capacity for international partners in regions of high biodiversity.

Once completed, we send a preview document to Jake Johnson, the treasurer of the organisation for review. We also send a copy to all members of the board, officers and directors included, for their review. We provide one week for this review and accommodate questions and comments into the document before filing it by the deadline.

#5: FormAndLineReferenceDesc: Part VI, Section C, Line 19

ExplanationTxt:

During this financial year, the organisation has made the following documents available to the public on the organisation's own website: <https://fieldprojects.org/about-us/> 1. All prior filed 990 forms 2. Our Form 1023. 3. Our CA registration. 4. Our CA renewal. 5. Our DUNS (#042155405) page. This is our first year filing a full 990 form and seeing the documentation within it such as a conflict of interest policy, a whistleblower policy, and a document retention policy. We are actively adopting all three of these types of policies at our next board meeting in May 2022.
